

Plumbing Training Courses: Is It Time To Start One?

If you think that the plumbing training at that trade school is too expensive and probably not worth paying that much money to attend, you should reconsider it. The median hourly pay for pipe layers in the United States was 13.68 and this was in 2004 when the wages were last studied. The lowest ten percent of plumbers, the ones who are just starting out on the job after passing their plumbing training courses were paid 9.19 each hour on an average and the highest ten percent earned more than 25.07. Since that time, the wages have risen.

What you should try to keep in mind about these figures is that they are for plumbers who are either in the middle of their training or have finished their training and are working for other plumbing companies or companies which are related to plumbing. Plumbers who work independently may earn even as much as $130 per hour. These people are usually paying overhead costs of the business and there are usually people working under them, so it is not as great as it seems.

There are academics in many parts of the world who are giving up their own professions and are signing in for plumbing training courses. Plumbing is becoming a profitable in many countries, and thus, this is an occurrence which can be seen in many parts of the world. The probable reason for this phenomenon might be the shortage of plumbers in the world, as the demand for plumbers is always more than the supply. This implies that plumbers who work for themselves can usually earn up to three times as much as college and university professors and some plumbers earn up to $150,000 per year.

Plumbing is not a job which everyone can handle even though the money can be great. You need to be able to deal with a lot of stuff and it is definitely not a glamorous job. Plumbers have to regularly deal with human excrement because they have to clear clogged pipes and toilets.

As there are many people wanting to train as plumbers, plumbing training schools are being set up in thousands in order to cash in on the phenomenon. Plumbers who have retired or those who have been working in this trade for many years are now teaching new plumbing students through intensive plumbing training courses so that the students will soon be able to employ themselves and earn good money.

There are many kinds of plumbing training courses. There are the intensive plumbing courses which are shorter and there are long courses which are suitable for those students who want to learn at a steady pace and do not want to be rushed into learning plumbing skills in a fast-paced course. You will get the same qualifications at the end of the course, only it will be easier than and not as taxing as the intensive course.

If you wish to train as a plumber, you should get enrolled in a plumbing training course now so that you can enter the trade very soon.

About the Author

James Copper is a writer for <http://www.plumbingcareer.co.uk> where you can find plumbing training courses

Source: <http://www.spivo.com>