

A Review of Kimono Condoms

Kimono is a Japanese company that specializes in making condoms that reach a standard of excellence. Unlike other condom companies, Kimono condoms are produced from a natural rubber latex and are 20% thinner than the usual condom. An example of their quality can be seen in the Kimono Microthin with Aqualube. This condom is 38% thinner than the standard condom and 20% thinner than that of other thin condoms sold by other companies. These condoms are form-fitting and are lubricated with water-based Aqualube. These qualities, plus the strength of the latex and the quality put into preventing breakage ensure a sensation-filled experience like no other. While this is all well and good, are you still looking for a little more to make your intimacy just a bit more special? Try Kimono Type E Condoms, which features rows of “Sensi-Dots” and ribbing both on the inside and out. Wearing one will add a new level of stimulation to your experience. Meanwhile, Kimono also features a condom for the larger guys, so to speak, with their Kimono Microthin Large. This condom is both larger and thinner than a normal condom, with a 25% larger head, 15% greater length, and 20% more thinness. Truly, this is a great option when you’re looking for a larger condom.

And of course when you’re buying condoms, you need lubricant, right? Well, Kimono has thought of that as well with its Kimono Aqualube. This type of lube has a special pH-balanced formula and is water-based, which means it can be used with condoms. Using Kimono Aqualube with Kimono condoms provides a whole new level of sensuality to your safe sex experience.

With this type of quality, it’s easy to see why Kimono condoms are considered some of the best condoms around! And since condoms are fairly inexpensive, it’s easy to buy them wholesale so that you can have a stash ready whenever you need one. Throw in some lubricants and maybe a sex toy like a vibrating ring and you’ll be all set!

So now you’ve bought some condoms and accessories, or at least are thinking about it, but there are probably some of you out there wondering about the more technical side of condoms—that is, how do you put one on? Putting on the condom is fairly simple, but needs to be done correctly each time. Put on the condom as soon as you are erect and before it comes in contact with your partner’s body. While squeezing the reservoir tip, unroll the condom all the way down to the base. After sex is over, pull out slowly while holding onto the condom at the base. Make sure to be careful when opening the packaging and always check to see that the condom is not damaged in any way before putting it on. And that’s how to put on a condom!

Condoms are an excellent choice when it comes to safe sex, as when used correctly, they are effective not only against preventing pregnancy, but also when it comes to STD and AIDS prevention. You couldn’t ask for more than that when it comes to contraceptives, right? Keep it safe and be sure to buy Kimono condoms when you’re choosing your birth control!
